This interagency potential natural vegetation project was fostered by the Willamette and North Coast Provincial Interagency Executive Committees. The project was begun by former Area Ecologist Jon Martin of the Siuslaw and Willamette National Forests. The project lost a great deal with the departure of Mt. Hood National Forest's Area Ecologist Nancy Diaz, but her contributions were keystones of the analysis. Pivotal BLM cooperators include Nancy Wogen and Wayne Elliott (Eugene BLM), Barbara Raible, Roger Monthey, and Paul Jeske (Salem BLM). Strong support from the NW Oregon Ecology group National Forests was received from Jose Linares (Siuslaw N.F.), Herb Wick (Willamette N.F.), and Tom Ortman (Mt. Hood N.F.). The whole effort was based firmly on the classifications for the Siuslaw, Willamette, and Mt. Hood National Forests by Ecologists Nancy Diaz and Miles Hemstrom, with Sheila Logan and Christopher Topik. Analysis of the new sampling and revision of the mountain hemlock series were the responsibility of Cindy McCain, for whom this has been extremely educational.
